Please describe your passion for Cain Center for the Arts (involvement with other arts companies, etc.):

My passion for the arts stems from a love for community involvement, specifically in terms of creating avenues to help others. Assuring that we foster the proper avenues to serve all members of the community, and create accessible artistic spaces and experience for everyone is vital to the prosperity of not only the community, but culture as a whole. This streamlined philosophy is indicative of our charity at Make an Impact, where our goal is to build the community for our families and children through growth and opportunity for all. With rapidly evolving societal progress, it is abundantly apparent that the arts will play a foundational role in creating this major transition, and as this culture is presented to us, it is of utmost importance that we recognize this privilege and use the Cain Center for the Arts as a vehicle to present these opportunities to community members who otherwise would be unable to participate. A new appreciation of the arts is inevitable for our social and professional community, and by bringing a business characteristic into the picture, specifically in terms of business connections, we can assure that this organization can profit, and we can build an investment and support base stronger than ever in the years to come.

Please describe any particular expertise and experience that you would be willing to share with the organization to improve its performance and success:

My experience with Quest and the Make an Impact Foundation, which cooperatively engage with each other, allows a unique connection with the professional community, specifically in businesses which are keen on philanthropy and building community investments. Make an Impact seeks to serve families and children across the area and beyond, and Cain Center for the Arts directly correlates this vision with the potential for community and educational programs which foster a community growth in that aspect. By serving families in need of financial support through the arts, we can bridge the connection between these families and community organizations and businesses that are looking to create change, just like we do. It is of vital importance to create these connections, and with my years of experience in the area, and the many business connections and relationships that we have built, I can confidently say that there is a major potential for an incredible community of growth, impact, and artistic support.
